

Create Something Out of Nothing

One October day in 2015, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un saw a subway train which was newly produced by the Kim Jong Thae Electric Locomotive Complex.

He spoke highly of its officials and workers, saying: I was very glad to receive the report that this complex carried out the task entrusted to it by the Party, doing so by its own strength and technology. You had pledged to produce a subway train without fail by October 10. You made painstaking efforts to fulfil this pledge. I really appreciate it.

He went on: This success has proved once again in practice that we can create something out of nothing if we rely on our intelligent scientists and technicians and enlist the inexhaustible strength of our workers and bring into full play their revolutionary spirit of self-reliance.
