

Test-piloting a Light Airplane

The following happened several years back when the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un saw some new light airplanes produced by relying on domestic resources.

He was very pleased to watch them taking off and flying high into the sky.

After a while, he said: The airplanes were made by our workers, and I should take one of them. Then, our scientists, technicians and workers will be delighted and strive hard to attain a more ambitious goal.

His entourage tried to dissuade him from taking the airplane, but he got on it.

After test-piloting it, he said: I have piloted the airplane produced by our workers, and its performance is very good. It is excellent. Please convey my thanks to them.
