

A Sci-tech Learning Space Added to the Factory

The following happened one July day in 2016, when the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited a factory again.

Looking round the interior of its sci-tech learning space, he praised that it was arranged very well in line with the plan and intention of the Workers' Party of Korea.

Originally, it had been a place for producing foodstuffs.

The officials of the factory had planned to produce foodstuffs and make use of the profits therefrom for updating the factory and improving its employees' living standards.

During his first visit to the factory, Kim Jong Un had said that it was not right to produce foodstuff there and taught to turn it into a sci-tech learning space.

Kim Jong Un asked an official of the factory how he liked the sci-tech learning space built there. The official answered he realized that sci-tech knowledge was the best shortcut to make profits.

Kim Jong Un, with a beaming smile on his face, looked round the sci-tech learning space for a good while.

That day, he said it would be more profitable to disseminate sci-tech knowledge to the employees and enhance the level of their technical skills.
