

As a Model Institute

One day, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited an e-business institute which was built by a province itself.

Being guided into a room, he stood for a good while, watching program developers working at their computers. A senior official of the province told him about the programs which had been developed by the province.

After listening to the official's explanation with interest, Kim Jong Un inquired in detail about the performance and technical specifications of the computers used by the institute.

While the relevant officials were explaining about the computers and programs, Kim Jong Un looked at the computers one by one with care. Then he said about their technical specifications, as well as their merits and demerits in developing programs.

All the officials were impressed by his plain explanation.

He said that the institute should focus on developing programs and make itself a prosperous model for the whole country to follow.

Listening to this, the officials made a firm pledge to lead the country in IT development.