

High Appreciation

One June day in 2016, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited the Pyongyang Cornstarch Factory.

Making the rounds of several production lines of the factory, he expressed great satisfaction at the fact that its technical team developed equipment and machinery by themselves.

Speaking highly of the factory as a textbook in Korean-style modernization, he asked to tell its officials, technicians and workers and other relevant units that contributed to the renovation that he was satisfied with the project and to convey his gratitude to them.

As it was a success achieved by the technical personnel of the factory by displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, he stressed over again the need to organize the visit to the factory on a wide scale.

Noting that all its production lines, ranging from raw material feeding to packaging, have been equipped with modern facilities designed and developed by themselves, he said: You should tell the visitors to the factory that I said the facilities in the factory are all good-looking like handsome men.